The transitional arrangements

A report compiled by the Joint Technical Task Team aimed at advising the Interim Council and the management of the new institution on processes of unbundling the Medunsa campus of the University of Limpopo and establishing a new university incorporating the Medunsa campus will be handed over to the Interim Council of the new university. The report proposes, inter alia, a distinctive academic model and Programme Qualification Mix for the new university, situates these in terms of the local, national and international health care and training contexts, examines infrastructure, facilities, space and clinical training platforms are likely to be required, together with the projected costs thereof, and suggests various transitional arrangements to facilitate the incorporation of the Medunsa campus of the University of Limpopo into the new university.

The Department of Higher Education and Training has developed a set of comprehensive and integrated policies and procedures in a form of guidelines for the establishment of a new university in South Africa. The guidelines are broad in scope and deal with among other areas of work: institutional governance; the office of the registrar; student governance; academic programmes; human resources; Information and Communication Technology (ICT); finance; library and information sciences; and facilities management.

The Interim Council may use these guidelines for the establishment of the new university to develop the systems and practices that will support high quality teaching and learning, academic programmes and productive research, and community engagements activities for the comprehensive health and allied sciences university.

The Protocol of Engagement that provides a framework to facilitate the incorporation of the Medunsa campus into the new health and allied sciences university has been developed. The Protocol seeks to provide a framework for effective communication, interaction, planning, preparation, implementation and mutual support between the University of Limpopo and the new health and allied sciences university during the transitional period in which the Medunsa campus is being separated, de-linked and unbundled from the University of Limpopo and being joined, linked and incorporated into the new university, leading up to the date of incorporation; and to ensure that operational decisions by any of the parties in this period do not adversely impact on the operational and organizational integrity of either the parent institution, the subdivision or the new health sciences university.

The Department of Higher Education and Training will provide technical support to the institution to ensure that the new university is fully established.
