MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY LAWS AMENDMENT BILL, 1997

1. The field of intellectual property law in South Africa is regulated primarily by the Patents Act, 1978 (Act No. 57 of 1978), the Trade Marks Act, 1993 (Act No. 194 of 1993), the Designs Act, 1993 (Act No. 195 of 1993), and the Copyright Act, 1978 (Act No. 98 of 1978). These Acts make provision for, respectively, the registration of patents, trade marks and designs in South Africa by both South African and foreign nationals; in the case of the Copyright Act, 1978, provision is made for copyright to subsist automatically in various types of works, both where those works emanate from South Africa and foreign countries.

2. The Merchandise Marks Act, 1941 (Act No. 17 of 1941), deals with the marking of goods sold in the South African market place, both by means of trade marks and other types of designations and descriptions. It provides a measure of protection against the counterfeiting of goods.

3. The Performer's Protection Act, 1967 (Act No. 11 of 1967), makes provision for protection in the nature of copyright to be conferred upon the performances of actors, singers and other persons who perform various types of work in public or for purposes of recording or broadcasting. Local South African performances as well as performances emanating from some foreign countries are protected in terms of that Act.

4. Amongst the international agreements concluded during the recent Uruguay round of GATT negotiations was the Agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (the "TRIPS Agreement"). South Africa has acceded to this Agreement. The TRIPS Agreement requires all parties thereto to provide certain minimum standards of protection for intellectual property in their laws dealing with this subject matter and lays down coercive measures which can be taken against those parties which do not meet their treaty obligations. As a party to the TRIPS Agreement, South Africa is obliged to ensure that its intellectual property laws meet the minimum requirements of the Agreement. Compliance with the TRIPS Agreement is already overdue.

5. In the field of patents there is in existence a treaty known as the Patent Cooperation Treaty (the "PCT"), done at Washington on 19 June 1970, to which South Africa has not acceded in the past because of its political isolation. The PCT provides for a simplified form of applying for the registration of international patents which is conducive to foreign inventors registering their patents in countries which are parties thereto and thus facilitating transfer of technology to those countries. South Africa's accession to the PCT is envisaged in order to attract foreign patent applications and thus technology transfer to South Africa. It is necessary to amend the Patents Act, 1978, in order to harmonise it with the provisions of the PCT and to make it possible for patent applications in terms of the PCT to be lodged and processed in South Africa. The commencement of these amendments are made subject to Parliament's approval of accession to the PCT in accordance with section 231(2) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1993 (Act No. 200 of 1993—the "Constitution").

6. There is in existence a protocol known as the Protocol on Patents and Industrial Designs Within the Framework of the African Regional Industrial Property Organization (the "ARIPO Protocol") adopted at Harare on 10 December 1982. The ARIPO Protocol makes provision for the registration of patents and designs on a regional collective basis throughout the countries of the parties thereto. As in the case of the PCT, it is also envisaged that South Africa accedes to the ARIPO Protocol. The amendment of the Patents Act, 1978, and the Designs Act, 1993, is necessary in order to make these laws compatible with the ARIPO Protocol and to enable applications in terms of the Protocol to be lodged and processed in South Africa. The commencement of these amendments are also made dependent on Parliament's approval of accession to the ARIPO Protocol.

7. In order to deal properly with the problem of counterfeiting of goods available on the South African market and to bring about South Africa's compliance with the TRIPS Agreement relating to counterfeit goods, and customs and other measures to counteract such goods, a draft Bill regarding the counterfeiting of goods has been prepared. This draft Bill overlaps with the Merchandise Marks Act, 1941, insofar as it deals with issues relating to the counterfeiting of goods. Accordingly, it is necessary to amend the Merchandise Marks Act, 1941, so as to avoid and eradicate these areas of overlap and to have all measures regarding the counterfeiting of goods dealt with comprehensively in a single law.

8. The TRIPS Agreement also deals with the question of the protection of the performances by performers. Certain amendments to the Performers' Protection Act, 1967, are necessary in order to ensure that the Act is fully in compliance with South Africa's obligations in regard to this subject matter contained in the TRIPS Agreement.

9. All the aforementioned intellectual property laws require some modernisation and updating in order to make them fully effective. This is particularly true of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1941, and the Performers' Protection Act, 1967, which were passed more than 30 years ago and have scarcely been amended since.

10. The main features of the amendments to the various intellectual property laws are as follows:

10.1 The amendments to the Merchandise Marks Act, 1941, seek to delete those provisions in the Act which deal with matters encompassed in the draft Bill regarding the counterfeiting of goods and to amend those provisions of the Act which are outdated and ineffective or require modernisation. These provisions include references to penalties which a court may impose upon a conviction for an offence under that Act. Amendments to provisions which may be in conflict with Chapter 3 of the Constitution are also suggested.

10.2 The proposed amendments to the Performers' Protection Act, 1967, seek to bring the Act into compliance with South Africa's obligations in this area under the TRIPS Agreement. It is proposed to extend the term of protection in terms of that Act from 20 years to 50 years and the protection afforded by the Act to performances emanating from countries which are parties to the TRIPS Agreement. It is also suggested that the Act be made retrospective so as to cover performances made before it came into operation on 30 December 1967. Certain adjustments to that Act are proposed so that it is brought up to date with advances in technology and increased usage of electronic and digital storage of information or signals. Certain amendments also seek to modernise several outdated provisions of the Act, including the penalties which can be imposed for any contravention of its provisions and the recognition of other broadcasters besides the SABC.

10.3 The proposed amendments to the Patents Act, 1978, seek to achieve compliance of the Act with the TRIPS Agreement and to make the Act compatible with the PCT and the ARIPO Protocol if South Africa accedes to those international agreements. Further proposed amendments to the Patents Act, 1978, seek to remove uncertainties relating to the payment of renewal fees for patents, priority dates of matter as opposed to patent claims, the principle of privilege regarding communications to and by patent agents and the assessment of damages.

10.4 Certain amendments to the Copyright Act, 1978, are suggested in order to achieve South Africa's full compliance with the provisions of the TRIPS Agreements relating to copyright. Certain extensions to the scope of copyright in computer programs and adjustments to the term of copyright in cinematograph films are proposed. The other adjustments to that Act are suggested so that it is kept abreast with advances in technology and the increased usage of electronic and digital storage of information or signals. Proposed amendments to the provisions of that Act relating to damages and other compensation due to a copyright owner pursuant to infringement seek to bring the Act into conformity with corresponding provisions of the Trade Marks Act, 1993, and the Designs Act, 1993. Further amendments are proposed in order to provide for all broadcasters.

10.5 The proposed amendments to the Trade Marks Act, 1993, seek to ensure compliance of the Act with the provisions of the TRIPS Agreement in this regard and to bring South African trade mark law into line with international norms and standards relating to the protection of well-known foreign trade marks. In addition it is proposed to correct or clarify certain other provisions of that Act.

10.6 Amendments to the Designs Act, 1993, are suggested in order to achieve compatibility between the Act and the TRIPS Agreement as well as the ARIPO Protocol. Other proposed amendments seek to correct or clarify certain provisions of that Act.

11. The draft Bill has been prepared by the Standing Advisory Committee in regard to copyright, trade marks, patents and designs constituted under section 40 of the Copyright Act, 1978. Being of a technical nature, the contents thereof were discussed with the South African Institute of Intellectual Property Law. In so far as the amendments to the Patents Act, 1978, relate to harmonising the Act with the PCT, close consultation with the World Intellectual Property Organisation (“WIPO”) took place. In several instances recommendations made by the South African Institute of Intellectual Property Law were accepted while representatives of WIPO participated in the drafting of the relevant amendments to the Patents Act, 1978.
