MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE DEBT COLLECTORS BILL

1. The Debt Collectors Bill, 1997, is one of two Bills emanating from the South African Law Commission's report on debt collecting (Project 74). The first hereof, namely the Magistrates' Courts Amendment Bill [B27—96], was introduced in Parliament (the Senate) during February 1996, but was subsequently withdrawn by the Minister of Justice, as the Senate could not finalise its deliberations on the Bill before the dissolution of that House under the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996 (Act No. 108 of 1996). This first Bill, which concentrated on the judicial debt recovery procedure and the abolition of the provisions regarding imprisonment for debt, has since been replaced by the Magistrates' Courts Amendment Bill, 1997.

2. The Debt Collectors Bill, however, focuses on another aspect pertaining to debt collecting, namely the so-called "extra judicial procedure" where creditors appoint other persons to collect their debts for reward, or cede their legal claims to such debt collectors. Numerous objections are frequently being raised by attorneys and members of the public against the conduct of these debt collectors. From a moral perspective the statutory regulation of debt collectors can hardly be questioned. Whereas legal practitioners are bound by prescribed tariffs for the work they do, are subject to disciplinary methods and ethical codes of conduct and, in their conduct, are bound by legislation and rules, no such safeguards exist in respect of the conduct of debt collectors. The Bill consequently purports to make provision for the establishing of a council, to be known as the Council for Debt Collectors, in order to deal with, and to exercise control over, the occupation of debt collector.

3. The provisions of the Bill are briefly summarised hereunder:

- (a) A Council is established so as to manage and control the activities of persons who recover debts for reward and who are not attorneys. The Council shall consist of a fit and proper person with a suitable degree of skill and experience in the administration of civil law matters (as chairperson), a magistrate, an attorney, at least two debt collectors, two other fit and proper persons and one person representing consumer interests. Council members are appointed by the Minister of Justice. The aim is to keep the Council as small as possible so as to establish a streamlined and cost-effective control mechanism. The Council may also establish an executive committee which could meet regularly.
- (b) All persons acting as debt collectors as defined in the Bill must register with the Council and pay subscriptions to the Council. It shall be an offence for anyone to carry on business as a debt collector while he or she has not been so registered, and such person shall on conviction be liable to a fine or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three years. The Council shall generate its own funds, and the payment of subscriptions will, among other things, serve as a source of finance.
- (c) Certain powers are conferred on the Council, such as the withdrawal of registration certificates, the drafting of a code of conduct for debt collectors and the imposition of fines on debt collectors found guilty of misconduct.
- (d) The money which a debt collector may recover from a debtor is limited in terms of clause 19. The Minister of Justice may prescribe the rates of expenditure and costs which a debt collector may recover in the Gazette and any account from a debt collector, or statement of costs, interest and payments made by a debtor would be subject to taxation or assessment by the clerk of a magistrate's court or a costs committee of a law society.
- (e) A debt collector must open a trust account and keep proper accounting records. All moneys received or held on behalf of another person (client) must be deposited in such account and must, within a reasonable or agreed time, be paid to such person. All interest on moneys deposited in a trust account must be paid to the person on behalf of whom such moneys were deposited.

4. The South African Law Commission consulted a variety of interested parties regarding the Bill, including members of the judiciary, the legal professions, consumers' organisations and numerous debt collecting agencies.

5. The Department of Justice and the State Law Advisers are of the opinion that the Bill should be dealt with in accordance with section 75 of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996.
