Transitional provisions

11. (1) Any person who at the commencement of this Act— 10

(a) was registered as a student at any university in the Republic with a view to obtaining the degree of baccalaureus procurationis and has satisfied the requirements for the said degree on or before 31 December 2002; or

(b) has satisfied the requirements for the degree of baccalaureus procurationis, shall be entitled to be admitted and enrolled as an attorney as if this Act had not been passed. 15

(2) Nothing in this Act contained shall prejudice any right or privilege, including the right to appear in or before any court of law, tribunal or other body, vested in any person who at the commencement of this Act—

(a) was duly admitted and enrolled— 20

(i) as an attorney in terms of the Attorneys Act, 1979 (Act No. 53 of 1979); or

(ii) as an advocate in terms of the Admission of Advocates Act, 1964 (Act No. 74 of 1964); or

(b) enjoyed such right or privilege on account of being in possession of any qualification in law, whether prescribed by law or not. 25

Short title

12. This Act shall be called the Qualification of Legal Practitioners Amendment Act, 1997.

MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE QUALIFICATION OF LEGAL PRACTITIONERS AMENDMENT BILL, 1997

1. At a Legal Education Forum held on 26 and 27 November 1996 and attended by the deans of all the law faculties in the Republic, as well as representatives of the legal professions, it was unanimously decided that there is a need for a uniform four-year legal qualification, to be named a baccalaureus legum degree, which will enable a person to enter any branch of the legal profession. The Bill under discussion aims to achieve this goal. All relevant stake-holders have since been approached in order to test the support for this proposal, with virtually all in favour thereof.

2. The only legal professions in respect of which certain minimum qualifications in law, as a prerequisite for admission into that profession, are statutorily prescribed, are the attorneys' profession (see the provisions of the Attorneys Act, 1979 (Act 53 of 1979)), the advocates' profession (see the provisions of the Admission of Advocates Act, 1964 (Act 74 of 1964)) and the appointment of a magistrate of a regional division (see section 9(b) of the Magistrates' Courts Act, 1944 (Act 32 of 1944)). In order to give effect to the decision taken at the Legal Education Forum, it is therefore necessary to amend certain of the provisions of the Attorneys Act, 1979, and the Admission of Advocates Act, 1964. These consequential amendments are reflected in clauses 1 to 10 of the Bill. No amendments to the Magistrates' Courts Act, 1944, are deemed necessary.

3. Besides the consequential amendments to the above-mentioned laws, it is considered essential that provision be made for transitional provisions which are aimed at the protection of persons with certain vested rights. For this purpose clause 11 is included in the Bill. This clause provides for the following protection:

- 3.1 The protection of persons who are currently engaged in studies for a degree of baccalaureus procurationis and who are aspiring to become attorneys, but who will not be able to complete their studies before the Bill under discussion becomes law (see clause 11(1)(a) of the Bill). These persons are given time until the year 2003 to complete their studies. In doing so, they will qualify (for purposes of the prescribed qualification in law) for admission as attorneys, as if the Bill was never passed. They will thus qualify for admission even though they will not be in possession of a baccalaureus legum degree, which will then be prescribed for admission into the attorneys' profession. It is not necessary to protect persons who are currently studying to become advocates, as the prescribed qualification for admission into the advocates' profession will remain the same, namely the degree of baccalaureus legum.
- 3.2 The protection of persons who, at the time when the Bill becomes law, are in possession of a degree of baccalaureus procurationis, but who have not been admitted to practise as attorneys (see clause 11(1)(b) of the Bill). Such persons would qualify indefinitely to be admitted as attorneys on the strength of their qualification in law (baccalaureus procurationis), even though he or she will not be able to comply with the qualification in law that will then be prescribed in terms of the Attorneys Act, 1979, namely a degree of baccalaureus legum. Again it will not be necessary to provide for similar protection for persons wanting to be admitted as advocates, as the prescribed legal qualification will remain the same.
- 3.3 The protection of persons who are already admitted and enrolled to practise as attorneys or advocates, at the time when the Bill becomes law (see clause 11(2)(a) of the Bill). This protection is deemed necessary in order to ensure that the change in the prescribed legal qualification does not in any way prejudice or affect any of the existing rights or privileges of these persons. Similarly a general protective measure is included in order to protect any existing right or privilege of any person who holds a position on account of any qualification in law (see clause 11(2)(b) of the Bill).
